Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Sunday, May 15

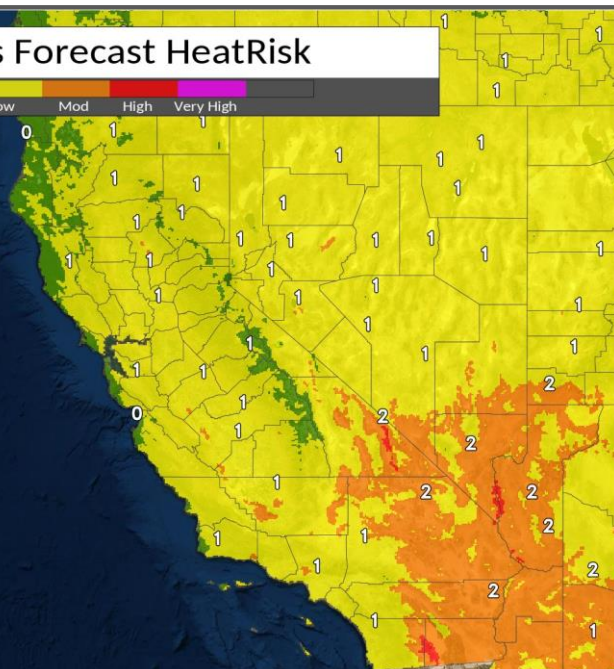

- Bouts of breezy winds are expected across the state at times through much of the week
 - Periodic wind gusts of 30 to locally 50 mph are expected, strongest across the southern California mountains and foothills
 - These winds will lead to periods of elevated fire weather conditions, primarily across southern California
- Temperatures will remain very warm for inland locations Sunday through much of next week, with a gradual cooling trend expected by late in the week
 - Daytime temperatures will warm through the lower to middle 90s across the Central Valley and areas of southern California away from the coast, while the southeast deserts warm to 100 to 108 degrees
 - Minor to moderate heat risk impacts are likely during the afternoon and early evening hours
- Mainly dry weather is forecast for the majority of the state through next weekend, though some light drizzle is possible across coastal northwest California through Monday, with a few additional showers possible for far northern portions of the state by late in the week
